THE IRON LAW OF WAGES.

THERE is a corollary to the Laws of Supply and Demand which is not often talked about because it is so very disagreebale. As Julius Caesar once remarked, and Julius was a very, very smart man, people easily believe what they want to believe and it is also true that they evidently come to believe something that it does not want, and is very properly scared about it. That is the why of this N. I. A. R. revolution that we are beginning this month.

The British economists of a century ago discovered that wages and salaries are just as much subject to the laws of supply and demand cotton or wheat. Congress and the League of Nations have both tried to abolish the fact, but it will not disappear, no matter how many resolutions are passed. The economists went further and worked out a theory that, since laborers tend to increase in numbers as food suprlies permit, wages must depend on the cost of living, and that they can never, in a free market, be much more than enough to allow the workers to live and breed. If they go higher more little laborers will be born, increas-If they go too low then a lot of the old workers will starve to death, thus wages up again. Rough as this may The individual employer is just as helpless about the matter as the laborer himself, because, if he pays a higher wage, his competitors will undersell him, and even drive him out of business. Unfortunately this is not merely Theoretical, because it worked perfectly for more than a century, in fact ever since the new machinery began to be invented and installed. We escaped the worst of it in this country until lately, because the free land of the West drained off the extra supply of labor, so that there was never a surplus until a few years ago. Certain European countries were not so fortunate.

It is perfectly surprising how lit tle is required to live. A quart of ers' scrap and stale vegetables, with some dry bread is plenty of food, The cost is about six cents a day, and as one woman remarked, "you don't get tired of soup if it is all you have.' There were, last spring, 900,000 people in New York City alone who had bought no new clothes at all for two working people. That much is better than nothing at all. People can live that way, and they do that exact thing. The man, or woman, or child, who doesn't have so much will work twelve to sixteen hours a day

Now, for the first time in our history, we have a surplus of labor, which is just about wrecking the country. Latest reports were that there were about eleven million unemployed out of fifty million workers. Many of these eleven million probably most of them, would be willing, even glad, to work for a dollar a day, or even less, if they could who takes advantage of the cheap and salaries move more slowly than other prices, whether up or down, so we have not felt the worst of this yet; but they have been going down and they will drop faster yet if we only limit to the drop is the price and wage levels will be on us before we know it. of soup and bread, or rice and beans,

Well, suppose we do let wages drop to that level, and have say a million rich people in our cities with sixty million wretchedly poor. Who will buy the stuff the farmer raises,not be enough buvers. How about that million of rich folks that Huey Long tells about? Who will buy the automobiles, radios, electrical gadgets, clothes, furniture-all that sort banks when their customers cannot sell? Where will the government get taxes to pay the bond-holders? Some folks believe that there really is a Santa Claus, and that all this theory is foolish nonsense. They reown business in their own way. Eviton think that there is something in There is no doubt every man and woman in it, or they would not be raising such commotion, and interferring so much with people who merely want to exercise their own legal and constitutional rights. They are scared, if you aren't.

Can we beat this iron law wages? or should about half of us lie down and peacefully starve to know. There will be big profits in beating the new regulations, and some folks will go a long way to make a profit. The real question is ligent enough, strong enough and generous enough to work together, instead of all going bankrupt together in one grand scramble, Sentiment for Legalization.

The sentiment for legalization of beer has been riding on a high tide with practically every political leader predicting passage of a beer bil whenever the Legislature does meet.

Advocates of legalized beer, hower, have not been able so far to budge Governor Sennet Conner in convening an extraordinary session for beer and repeal. The governor has stated often that he does not consider beer and repeal, of themselves, alone sufficiently important for an extraordinary session.

MRS. M. V. GEX'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED.

Mrs. M. V. Gex's eighty-first birthlay was celebrated Saturday, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gex, residing in Court street, complimenting her at a birthday dinner during the afternoon hours to which were twelve covers.

The table was unusually beautifully decorated for the happy occasion and Mrs. Gex was the recipient of quite a number of remembrances from relatives and friends as well.

An interesting incident of the day was the receipt of a cablegram from another son, Walter J. Gex, although far off at the time sailing the Pacific seas, extending congratulations and best wishes.

It is almost co-incident that Mrs. Gex should receive a cablegram last year on the same day conveying good wishes and congratulations. Last summer two of her granddaughters, then Misses Laurin and Norma Gex. now respectively Mrs. E. J. Lacoste and Mrs. H. Grady Perkins, were traveling Europe and even though far away and their interest engrossed in scenes and things foreign, did not forget their grand-
